THE TWENTY-SECOND .- The anniversary of the birthday of the Father of his Country, the immortal Washington, was celebrated in our city yesterday with more than usual real heartfulness. The stores were generally closed. Business of all kinds was suspended, and the citizens made a complete holiday of the occasion. It was appropriately celebrated by nearly all the civic and military associations. We mention a few which claim our especial notice:

The Butchers' Association made a fine display. About one hundred of them, in their picturesque uniform, arrayed in white shirts and blue scarfs, preceded by Plato's Saxhorn band in a carriage drawn by four horses, and marshaled by Messrs. George Kice and Louis Rhem, and all mounted, paraded early in the morning. It was a splendid body of men, and their snowy garments were in keeping with the snow-covered streets. They are always to be relied upon as good citizens, under all circumstances. Full of patriotism and public interest, they are always ready to do their duty.

A most excellent discourse was delivered by Mr. Ezra Woodruff upon the subject "Knowledge is Power." The Farewell Address of Washington was read effectively by Mr. Wm. M. Gray, and an address upon "Grecian Art" was admirably spoken by Mr. Wm. G. McConathy.

The Catholic Literary Association celebrated the day by the delivery of a beautiful and eloquent ad- Harper of the R. M. Patton for a copy of the manidress at Mozart Hall by Mr. Wm. M. Kelly, a gen-fest. tleman of fine literary attainments and most excellent taste.

[For the Evening Bulletin.] THE HUMAN HEART.

What is it like to !- a murmuring stream,

Laughing in brightness along; Soothing and soft as a braut'ful dream Woven of blossoms and song.
A broad sea of brightness, is sleeping away, Where its waters may peacefully rest, But oft are they dried by some sun-scorching ray,

Ere they meet in its sheltering breast! What is it like to?-a violet meek, liiding away in the shade, Veiling its modest and innocent cheek, "Half fearless and yet half afraid." You know not its sweetness, you know not its worth, Till you woo forth its hidden perfume, And you wonderhow aught of so royal a birth So long all unliceded could bloom.

What is it like to?-a rose in its pride, Lifting ils towering head, Scorning the humble that droop at its side, Whose glory and gladness have fled. You smile and admire, you gather the gem. And wed it some fair sunny morn, But a shock of adversity sbaketh its stem, And all that remains is-a thorn:

What is it like to !- the sky in its gladness, Bending in beauty above, Shadeless and sini as, unseeming of sadness, Lifting its eyelld of leve.

But change cometh o'er it, a cloud dims its blue, Then anon breaks a lovelier ray. And such is the heart with its varying huc-'Tis sunlight and shadows for ave!

"And last, though not least," it is like a young dove, Whose chords we mean never to sever; We build up a fortress, and dare it to love, But talk of true friendship forever! We get the dear darling but pluion its wing Till, fearless, we give it more air, Wemyss Jobson, has sued some client for fees, and on the trial the denfense attempt to show that Jobson is a shyster, and a notoriously bad character, and Loli Montez is called to testify to his having been a jail bird in London, &c.

As Lola never yet engaged in anything that did not end in a fight somehow, so her examination clo ed with a fisticall' etween the lawyers in open court.

At her first examination in the case she gave a sketch of her life. On Thursday she was again cadled, when an attempt was made to impeach her testimony by leading her to contradict her former statement. She was first asked if her real name was not Betsy Watson, and if she was not born in the town of Montrose, in Scotland, in 1815, instead of Limerick, as she had previouely sworn, also if her nother's name was not Molly Watson.

Lola—I don't choose to answer, and no power on earth will make me answer when I den't intend it.

Mr. Schermerhorn (attorney for Johson)—Were you not assistant chambermaid in the Stay Inn of the town of Montrose, and did you not run off with Lieut, James?

Lola—Well, really that is too absurb—a enumbermaid—had had a cambermaid!

Mr Seely—as to your means of knowledge of that fellow over there?

Mr. Jobson here rose, and Indignantly said, (addressing Mr. Seely) that he would not be called a fellow, he would not allow it from a vagabond, a shyster, and added something to the effect that he would Indict personal chastiement, and rushed at Seely with a small cane which he held in his hand. Mr. Seely selzed the cane and took it away, when they both made a rush at each other. The stove was fortunately—or unfortunately—between them; but the tego of it fiew in one direct on, the instands flew in another, and papers and books flew in all directions, and for a few moments looked like Donnylrook Far on a small scale. About two weeks ago we noticed the arrest in this city of a young man from a bordering town in Canada, on a charge of forging the name of his father, who had traced him to this city. By request we refrained from giving his name. The whole story is now published in the Detroit Advertiser, and we make the following synopsis:

The telegraph announced a day or two ago that a forgery had been committed on the Montreal Bank at London. The party was Alex. W. Anderson, who forged his own father's name. The circumwho forged his own father's name. The circumstances are briefly these: Anderson senior set his son up and assisted him in business by making an arrangement with the bank to endorse his son's paper, in a wheat and produce business. He did endorse, and the son, by having bad associates, squandered the proceeds of his business, and, finding he was coming out mlnus, forged his father's name tor about $10,000. The fight of Anderson on the 28th and that of his wife in the 29th became known; the bank became alarmed; inquiry was instituted and the for-

CULTURE OF RASPUERRIES. -Your favorable no-tice of my Raspberries, in the Ohio Valley Farmer, has encouraged me to send you in detail my views of the proper cultivation and treatment of this fruit, with some estimate of the profits ariting frur, with some estimate of the profits arking threrom.

Of all the Raspherries I have tried, I have no hesitation in pronouncing the "Hudson Kiver Rad Antwerp" to be far the most productive and profitable. It is very hardy too, never having been seriously injured on my place, except in the winter of 1855-56, after which we had half a crop. And here let me say that I have not as yet cultivated, to any great extent, any other of the finer varieties, though I design to do so. Brinkle's Orange is said to rival the Antwerp in productiveness, and being the larger herry, with just as rich a flavor, it may surpass the latter in everything except color. If, bewever, as I am informed, the Orange is a later fruit, it will not come into competite a with the Antwerp, but combine with it to lengthen out the fruiting season.

is a later fruit, it will not come into competitical with the Antwerp, but combine with it to lengthen out the fruiting season.

My directions, then, arc for the Antwerp, but are no donot suitable for other varieties, with modifications adapted to their different habits of growth. I would select the location for the plantation on ground with an eastern or southern exposure; but I think the rasplerry will do well in any situation not too much shaded or in a cold hollow. These and other small ruits may be planted to advantage in a young orchard of apple or other large growing fruit trees; but in this case they should be removed as the trees grow larger and require the space. The soil should be rich (if a little sandy it is all the better) and deep. It will pay well to subsoil and underdrain it before planting, if not naturally underdrained. The ground should be lid off in rows, but to five feet apart. The planting may be facilitated by throwing out a deep furrow with the plow. Then let the plants be set from three to four feet apart in rows. I have hitherto set the plants three by four feet apart; but I design, hereafter, to increase the distance in order to facilitate the critivation of the ground, and the gathering of the fruit, and to permit the sun to penetrate and the air to circulate more freely among the plants. And the desirableness of this free admission of light and air will be manifest to any one who will notice the superiority, in quality, of the fruit on the will be manifest to any one who will notice the su-periority, in quality and quantity, of the fruit on the outside of the outer rows of a patch over that on inside rows.

Select well-grown plants of the list year's growth, and take them up with as much of the root as possible. Set two or three plants in a place, if you have a sufficiency, as you will thus get more fruit the first year, with a greater certainty of a good number of young sprouts for the next season roots should be covered a little deeper than where

When set out, the plants should be cut down (in the spring) within eighteen inches of the ground The next spring remove the old wood, select three canes if there be so many, and cut them down as before. At the third year, and afterwards, remove early in the spring the old (dead) wood and all snperfluous plants, leaving from four to six in a place of the most thrifty. Cut these off three or tour feet from the ground, weave them together slightly at the top, and tie with a bit of string or willow Thus treated they seldom need a stake to suppor them. Sur the ground lightly with the hoe or cultivator with sufficient frequency to keep down the suckers and weeds, of course leaving such plants undisturb ed in the hills as are necessary to form the bearing wood for the next year. This should be continued after the fruit is gathered, unless it is desired to raise plants for setting out, for the obvious reason that thereby the whole strength of the root is thrown into the plants to be left standing, rendering them more thrifty and better prepared to yield a full crop of fruit. I have recommended slight or shallow cultivation, for the reasons that the ground is pervaded in every direction by a mass of fibrous roots, the wholesale aundering of which from the plants the wholesale sundering of which from the plants must, I think, be injurious at any other season than late in autumn. Even then it is not necessary, for the ground is always loose and light by reason of these innumerable roots, and the shading from the summer's sun by the dense foliage.

The father traced Anderson to Louisville, Ky., where he was imprudent enough to stop and open a correspondence with his wife.

The father goes to the Louisville Hotel and searches the register; while doing so, one of the proprietors inquires his lussiness, and on the father's informing him, actually produces a letter addressed to A. W. Anderson, Esq., Louisville Hotel, Louisville, Ky. The knowledge that he was in the city or neighborhood was now certain. The police were aroused, the capture easily effected in the open street, and the delinquent brought back.

The following is a portion of the letter addressed to him by his wife, who had been advised by a letter from Barnwell in the meantime that her husbadd was accused of forgery. The letter breathes the spirit of a true woman's heart:

WATERLOO, Feb. 4, 1858

I am just in receipt of Form Marken of the course of the cours all that is necessary to keep up the fertility of the soil.

The rich, red, pulpy fruit begins to ripen about the first of July, and continues for four or five weeks, increasing gradually for the first week or ten days, then in rich abundance for about two weeks, after which there is a gradual decrease for a week or more to the close of the fruiting season. The ripe berries should be gathered three times a week, handled very carefully, and conveyed to market in a vehicle on springs. My plan is to put the fruit, as soon as gathered, into boxes holding one and two quarts. If purchasers require remeasurement, it is very easy to shake the berries out into the measure, without braising them so much as by shoveling them up from a tray ordrawer. Some a tin boxes, but I prefer wooden ones, because the tin discolors the fruit. The extreme tenderness of the Antwerp WATERLOO, Feb. 4, 1858.

I am just in receipt of your letter, and was glad to hear that you were In such good opirits, but an very much affaild you are in trouble by this time. I set home all safe, and trunks all right; but was thrown into be recorded and trunks all right; but was thrown into Errorou Saturday by a man comit; g and inquiring for you here. I had so much to take sair of that I let't be gold for liarmwell to send the next day, never doubting him nor thinking he would turn right against us the moment we were sone. I telegraphed to him or Saturday, but heard nothing until yes eviday, when he wrote that they had telegraphed a description of you North, Sonth, East, and Weet, and officers were in pursuit of you. Satather had said you had orged his mane to the tune of $16,000, and flob sid ten housand. Now, Alick, we all know it is as base a lie as ever was invented by human tongues, and if father has perjured himself by saying so to get rid of paying your debts, I hope he will suffer. One thing you may be sure of, Alick, that i will stick to you through thick and thin, and our folks will give me a good home till all is settled up or cooled down. It throws us into the greatest miery imaginable, and if you should ever he solucky as to get this letter, be very canitous where yon go or what you say. Barnwell said I would be watched closely, and so 1 a will go to Geneva to post this.

eight square rods in extent, sold for over twenty-five dollars in 1854, and for the same um in 1855, leaving out in each case what was consumed by the family.

Since then, having other patches coming into Since then, having other patches coming into bearing, I have not kept an accurate account. From these facts and reliable information. I estimate that from $400 to $500 worth of this fruit can be raised from one acre of land, at 20 cents per quart. But the expenses of cultivating, gathering, and marketing will be high, say from $150 to $200 per acre. And what more profitable, or agreeable business can be found? Indeed, it does seem strange to me that so few are engaged in the cultivation of this lightly prized and exceedingly profitable fruit. I have placed the price below the average. During the last three or four years it has ranged from 20 cents to 30 cents per quart for Antwerps, taken to market to 30 cents per quart for Antwerps, taken to market in good order. Of course, with great increase of production, we may expect these prices to be dimin-ished; but for such a fruit the demand will justify a considerably greater supply than is at present furnished WM. Macharl"—A rick thing transpired in the constant of the constant of the stant of the constant o strengthened, and he tool the old gentleman what he had heard, and asked what he should do.

Mr M directed him to arm himself and go out and see who was there. He accordingly made his way to the kitchen, after extinguishing the gas in the house, and, arming himself with a heavy saidlet, stepped out the back door. The darkness prevented him from seeing anything, but he distinctly heard some one creeping steathfully towards where he stood. John awaited breathlessly for the may to get within reach of him, which the latter no secner did than he received a tremendous blow on the flead with the skillet, and the other immediately closed with him and attempted to secure him.

skillet, and the other immediately closed with him and attempted to secure him.

The blow of the skillst had not quite disabled the "borglar," and he showed considerable strength, and John was getting the worst of it, when he called for his father to help him. The old gentleman seized a heav; cane and hastened to the scene of the conflict, but in the darkness was for some time unable to distinguish his con John from the burgler. At last, bowever, he found out "which was which," by John speaking, and he pitched in, club and all, and, after a stort struggle, they succeeded in capturing the fellow, and took him, in a speechless condition, but the house.

On telighting the gas, they discovered to their fufinite surprise that they had been beating James, instead of a thief, and that they had almost knocked the breath out of him. Of course, every effort was made to restore him, which they happily succeeded in doing this short time, after which the matter was explained on all sides. James had gone out for the statistics whether there was any one purpose of a certaining whether there was any one in the yard, and thinking he heard some one, he tapped on the window for them to come out.

When he reached the back of the house and heard John open the door and step out in a stealthy manner, he was sure he had discovered the thief, and attempted to take him. Beceiving the blow from ner, he was sure he had discovered the thier, and attempted to take him. Heceiving the blow from the killet did not have the effect of taking the notion out of his head, and he "pitched in," and, until John was reinferced by his father, stood a fair chance of securing him. Serious as the matter was, it might have been much worse, and the occurrence shows the necessity of persons under such circumstances being perfectly "sure of their man" before they run the risk of shooting, or otherwise seriously injuring an innocent person -Detroit Advertiser.

A PURSEVERING WOMAN—Walking Four Hundred Miles for a Husband.—Near Norwich, Chenango county, N. Y., lived two families of well-to-dofarmers, between whom there existed as bitter a feud as ever raged between the Montagues and Capulets. The heads of the families consumed the bulk of their time in annoying each other, and the children on both sides, with two exceptions, inherit-ed their parents' harred, and lost no opportunity of

and the second dadquer of the other, and, seeing no reason why they should hate each other in imitation of their parents, become desperately enamored. The parents soon discovered how matters stood, and of course were enraged. John and Mary were both severely reprimanded, and charged particularly to think no more of each other. But who ever heard of suce a charge being obeved? The more they were teld not not used in this county. Mary's progenitors beheld not answer, the parents of John and idle to out used in this county. Mary's progenitors beheld her up for a week, to keep her from following him. After his departure the prograft had a serious time of it. Her parents cuffed her to cure her of despondency, her brothers and sisters added to her unhappiness by continued taunts and revilings, until her home became insupportable.

One night in November last, the whole family joined in reviling and abusing her. Not a word did see say in reply, but her ash, face and bloodless lips showed that something was browing. As soon as the family had retired, she put on her bonnet and shard, and going down from her room, noiselessly unlocked the door, and walked out into the durlness. Half crazed, she had thought of nothing but escape, and had not provided herself with any necessaries for the long journey she had undertaken. She knew where John was, and she determined to reach him. By davlight she had achieved ten miles. Ata farm house she procured breakfast, and making inquiries, set out again. Day after day she traveled eating and sleejing at farmhouses. Occasionally a charitable wagoner would carry her a few miles, and that, and pat herself under his protection. Novel Cure for Love.—A new and amusing cure for love has lately been found effective in a fashionable Parising faubourg. The son of a wealthy nobleman became enamored of the pretty daughter of his father's concierge (door porter), and determined to marry her. The aristocratic papa, of course, opposed; but, moved at last by the despair of his son, gave his consent, with the proviso that the smitten youth should go to sea for twelve months before the youth should go to sea for twelve months before the marriage. Shortly after his departure, the father, who had previously observed a tendency to embon-point in the young intended, took her under his especial charge, gave her every kind of the most nonrishing and succulent food and good wines, forlands her to take exercise as unbecoming his future hade her to take exercise as unbecoming his future daughter, and, in fact, stall fed her to such an extent that when the enamored swein returned from his year's voyage, he was horrified to find, instead of the sleuder, elegant girl he left, an immensely fat woman, as big as two Albonis rolled into one. Of course the ruse was successful, and the unfortunate victim of need cheer has been pensioned off. victim of good cheer has been pensioned off.

Extravagance in Washington.—At Lady Napier's late ball, the wife of the Count do Sartiges wore diamonds to the amount of several thousands of dollars. The lace robes worn by Mrs. Matthews, of Alabama, cost $3,000. Mrs. Gwin, of California, also were a robe of Honiton lace, valued, with its decorations, at $2,500. The dress worn by Lady Napier cost nearly the same figures.

CAPTORE OF AN AMERICAN SLAVER ON THE COAST OF AFRICA—The following is an extract from a letter dated from the Majesty's ship Sap-tho, Sept. 20, 1857, off Loandor tho, Sept. 20, 1857, off Lounder.

We returned to Loando en the 15th; we left the following day. On the 18th, in a thick mist with rain, we closed with a schoouer; while bonding her the weather cleared, and a large ship was seen close to the land. Directly our boats returned, we made all sail in chase, the ship making all sail to avoid us, and the chase became very exciting. The captains said we were gaining, and so they must have thought on board the ship, as he tacked in shore and we after him; then he lore away, running along the edge of the surf, and by help of his large sails was one of the large American slave ships, and we feared he would escape if he got tea-roon; so the captain took a boat well manned and armed and pulled to windward to cut him off, when he would be obliged to take off shore; another boat was sent to leeward, the master, the only officer on board, being left in charge.

The ship was not more than a mile and a half dis tant, close to the surf. Seeing the trap laid for him, and that he could not escape, he ran his ship ashore. We anchered in four fathous; the master took the whale-boat close to the ship, and was soon joined by whale-boat close to the ship, and was soon joined by the other boats. The ship was rolling in the breakers with all her sails flapping about, and appeared to be full of slaves; the master and crew had abandoned her with their boats, leaving the American colors flying. Then we all beheld a dreadful scene; the slaves forced their way from below, jumped overboard, and soon disappeared in the rollers; it was terrible to see them. Our officers and mer, regardless of their own lives, pulled through the surf to leeward of the ship, but her heavy lurching for some time prevented their boarding; when they succeeded, the scene was horrifying, the slaves still forcing their way up from the slave decks with loud yells, running to and fro, and continuing to throw themselves overboard. All attempts to pacify them were useless; force was necessary to drive them bewere useless; force was necessary to drive them be-low until preparations could be made for their safety.

We are told by one of the slaves who could speak Portuguese, that they were told the English would cut all their throats. As soon as the loats could be attended to, the cutter was backed under the stern, and a rope thrown her; then three of the slaves were permitted up at a time and lowered into the boat, the whole-local conveying them through the rollers to the large boat, and so on to the Suppho; this continued until 8 P. M. The surfucreased, and it was timed until 8 P. M. The surflucreased, and it was impossible to save more that night. One hundred and eighty were rescued. The master was left with a guard on board. It was an anxious and a sleep-less night for all, as death was rapidly decreasing the number of the poor negroes, who, starving and naked, died from utter misery—men, women, boys, and girls, more than 200 on board the Sappho, and, as they ceased to breathe, we were obliged to throw them overboard. Fortunately, we had plenty of rice, which we fed them with, and placed them as best we could under cover of sails. As food and warmth restored them, in various ways they signified their sense of kindzees. fied their sense of kindness.

On board the schooner the master and guard were On board the schooner the master and guard were with the remaining negroes in a perilous state; the former passed the night in the forecastle and bowsprit, drenched by the spray of the heavy rollers. At dawn on the 19th, the wind and surf had increased; the ship had been driven closer to the beach; numbers of armed people were collected; a signal for assistance was made; the captain went with all the loads a manual armed when the nawith all the boats manned and armed, when the nawith an the boats manned and armed, when the natives on the beach, led on by the white men, apparently the crew of the ship, commenced firing with the intention of preventing the rescue of any more negroes. This continued an hour before we could clear the beach, some of our shots apparently telling well. On again boarding the wreck she was found breaking up, with her hold full of water. On the tide receding, her hull was nearly dry, and there was no time to spare. The large boats were stawas no time to spare. The large boats were sta-tioned to keep the beach clear with their guns; the cutter was anchored at the back of the surf, and by watching the rollers they succeeded in throwing her a rope, when the negroes were lowered and hau'ed through the surf, and conveyed as before to the Sap-phe, 200 more being rescued; then the wreck was fire to and our people withdrawn. We were in such a state, with 380 negroes crowding our decks; the stench was putrifying, and it was impossible to work the ship. In this state the second day closed upon us. We were 40 miles from Sbarks' day closed upon us. We were 40 miles from Sharks' Point; the Captain resolved to go in his boat and ask for assistance. They pulled all night in heavy rain, and at daylight on the 20th fortunately met the Vesuvius, Commodore Wise, with whom the Captain returned. Commodore Wise took the negroes on board the Vesuvius, to be sent to Sierra Leone in the Alector prize. Having the slaves on board has caused much sickness; it is passing without any fatal case. We are ordered to the Cape, we suppose to cruize in the Mozambique Channel; if so, it is probable our bones will be lett there; its effects, it is probable our bones will be left there; its effects, after what we have been through for twenty months on this coast, will be finishing.

I have given you the history of one of the many American ships employed in the slave trade; six. I think, have been taken. We seized the Panhita 30 miles up the coast, and sent her to New York; we do not know whether the American Government will condemn her. condemn her.

A SPIRIT IN WESTCHESTER .- We learn from the A SPIRIT IN WESTCHESTER.—We learn from the Spiritnal Telegraph that the spirit of J. P. Donnelly, who was recently hung for the Seaview House murder, was last heard from in Tarrytown, where it took possession of a "medium" in "a circle of eighteen intelligent persons" at "the house of Mr. Alfred Lister.' In this tribunal the spirit made "at great length" a plea of not guilty, and expressed satisfaction because "that dear girl Lizzy" believed it innocent.

It is not stated where Mr. Donnelly's spirit goes next, though we see no reason why it she settle in Tarrytown.

The question of divorce, that has long agitated the ecclesiastical authorities of Eugland, has culminated at last in the recent promulgation of an o der from the Bishop of Oxford to the clergy of his diofrom the Bishop of Oxford to the clergy of his dio-cese, enjoining upon them to grant no authorization of marriage, however conformable in other respects, to any person who may have obtained a decree of divorce, if the husband or wife of such person so divorced be still living. This pastoral instruction has created considerable sensation, inasmuch as it comes in conflict with the authority and intention of the civil law, which allows the marriages thus sought to be prevented.

Funeral of the Quillen of Oute —The funeral of the Queen of Oute took place on Wedgesday at Paris, and was could ten with extraordicary magnificence. The body was imbalined on Monday night, and for the purposes of the operation, according to the custom of the religion to which the deceased belonged, it was found necessary to construct a kind of wooden platform in the countivard of the hotel where the body of the princess could undergo the ceremony of thorough ablution. The features of the deceased were but very little changed. No incisions were made for the operation of embalming, as is usual in Europe; the people of the suite, who themselves efficied the operation, introduced promatic substances and persumes through the mouth, themselves effected the operation, introduced promatic substances and pertumes through the mouth, ears, and nostrils, and repeatedly annointed the body with odoriferous oils and essences. The body was afterward wrapped round with bands of fine muslin, and the whole covered with a crimson cloth embroidered in g. ld. Atter this had been done, the religious service commenced. The tennales, whether relatives of the desented or ladies of the balact, and afterward the efficies and servants intered successively into the chamber where the body was laid out, and where two priests recited the bravers precessively into the chamber where the body was laid out, and where two priests recited the prayers prescribed by the religion in which the princess had lived. The tennies uttered deep greans, and the men showed every sign of grief. The light was burning in the room, but a tire was lighted in the court, which was, according to custom, to be kept burning until after the body had been removed. The hearse and mourning chacles arrived at the door of the Hotel Laffitte at ten o'c ock on Wednesday merging, but were sent away again, in conseday merning, but were sent away again, in consequence of the tire not having been burning long enough. The funeral process ion was not formed till two o'clock. The hearse, which was entirely covered with silver tissue, was drawn by six white

The chief mourner was the youngest son of the late Queen, Mirza Hasmet Lekendal Bahada, who bears the title of General, and is a brother of the sovereign now confined in Calcutfa. He is a man of about thirty years of age, of good heighth, and rather corpulent. He wore on his forehead a diadem ornamented with rubies, and was dressed in rich silk and velvet robet. This high personage arrives from London on Tuesday, and on cresenting himself at the Hotel Luffitte, all the officers and servants in the Queen's suite prostrated themselves servants in the Queen's suite prostrated thenselves before him. It is worthy of note that M'rza Bahada, while following the coffin on foot, leant on the arm of Gen. D'Orgoni. A very great crowd assembled in the Rue Lafitte to see the procession pass. When the body left the house, a number of Indian women of extraordinary negliness but dressed in When the body left the house, a number of Indian women of extraordinary ugliness, but dressed in lich and picturesque costnmes, appeared weeping in the balcony; they were probably attendants of the late Queen. There were about a dozen natives, who followed Mirza Bahada as mourners on foot, and there was a line of ten mourning coaches, all filled. The body was interred in the Mussulman cemetery at Pere la Chaise, the deceased being a Mohammedan. Her name is inscribed on the register of deaths at the mayoralty of the second arrondissement as "Malka Kachwar, Queen of the kingdom of Oude: dled. Rue Lafitte, ared fifty-three dom of Oude; dled, Rue Lafitte, aged fifty-three years." A blank is left for the place of her birth, which none of her attendants were able to state.

A FIGHT IN CONGRESS SIXTY YEARS AGO.—The first open fight which occurred in Congress took place in old "Congress Hall," Philadelphia, on the 15th of February, 1798. The combutants were Matthew Lyon, of Vermont, and Roger Griswold, of Connecticut. What was the precie nature of the difficulty between them will "more fully appear," probably, on consulting Niles's Register of that day; certain it is, the parties were intensely bitter toward each other, and appear to have "nursed their wrath to keep it warm" for many days.

On the 30th of January, 1798, the two members had high words, when Lyon deliberately spit in Griswold's face. It seems the insult was not resented until the 15th of February ensuing. On this day Griswold, on his way to the Hall, called at the store of John McAllister, 48 Chestnut street, and purchased a heavy cane, and entering the Hall, where he found the members in session, approached Lyon (who was sitting with his back towards him) A FIGHT IN CONGRESS SIXTY YEARS AGO .- The Lyon (who was sitting with his back towards him) and dealt him three heavy blows on the head. Lyou recovered himself at once and seized a pair of tongs, and between cane and tongs the fight was continued for some minutes. A song of those days describing the scene says:

Who seized the tongs to ease his wrongs,
And Grisweld thus engaged, sir,

On the day Lyon insul ed Griswold, the House appointed a Committee of Investigation. The witnesses were Sim. Smith, Brooks, Dana, Hosmer, Coit, Goodrich, and Chipman. What action the committee recommended does not appear; probably none whatever, and hence Griswold sought his own remedy. The fracts afterwards was also made the subject of investigation, but neither member was expelled. "Mutual explanations" were probably as much in vocue in those days as now. much in vogue in those days as now.

TURKISH BATHING CUSTOMS.—When a Turkish TURKISH BAHHING CUSTOMS.—When a Turkish lady bathes, her attire is first altogether removed. An attendant takes a glove (every day it is a new glove) of undressed silk. With the disengaged hand, she pours over her mistress basin after basin of warm water. Then, by means of a gentle friction of the glove, she slowly removes the salts and impurities deposited on the skin. This done, the attendant covers the lady from head to foot by means of a mop of downy silk, with a lather made of particular emollient soap. Upon this soap, which is a kind believed to be peculiar to Turkey, depends much of the pencil-like softness and smowy whiteness of the skin, for which relined Eastern women ness of the skin, for which relined Eastern women ing stains, spots, and freekles not deeply marked into the cuticle. This part having been carefully performed, the lady is again deluged in water, heated to about 120 degrees, and poured over her person from a silver basin. Large towels of the finest muslin, richly embroidered with flowers and activity at they wrapped around her, and she is led emarkable; 1 gold, are then wrapped around her, and she is led into an apartment, where, reclining on a heap of cushions, she sinks into a soft, dream-like languor, that might become faintness, were it not for the as siduity with which she is fanned.

SPANISH POWER IN AMERICA—THE ANDES —Let all who wish to be entertained, and at the same time instructed, go and hear Mr. Dix to-night at Masonic Temple. The lecturer came among us as a stranger, but we feel assured he will bear with him the "God speeds" of the many hearts that have throbbed with pleasure beneath the sunshine of his genius.

The flowery land of which he speaks-full of beauty and grandeur-the passing away of the Incas' race-the planting of the eternal cross upon the grand old Andes-are all subjects susceptible of being woven into a chain of glorious beauty. The lecturer will do full justice to his subject-his audieuce-himself. Go to Masonic Temple to-night.

BY TE EGRAPH.

Reported for the Evening Bulletin XXXVTH CONGRESS-FIRST SESSION. Tuesday's Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23, Senate —The bill to amend the act of March 3d. 1831, limiting the liabilities of ship owners, was taken up at d passed.

Mr. Berl of Tenna, presented resolutions of the Legislature of Fennesses respecting his opposition to the Nebraska bill and endersing the Lacompton constitution, and intimating that he ought to resign. He referred to the date of the resolutions (10th February), four years after the vote was given, which the resolutions centured, and said it had been usual when the constituents of a number of Congress felt aggrieved at his course to act promptly.

House — From the Commit es of the Whole on Indian appropriations, Mr. Burroughs vindicated the North from the charge of sectionalism preferred by Southern gentlemen, referring to statistical facts showing immense preponergance of extenditures of showing immense preponeerance of expenditures of the government in Lehalf of the South over the North, and contrasting the superiority of the North over the South in industry, wealth, population, edu-cation, etc. He proceeded to denonnee Pierce and Buchanan for their cour e in the Kansas question. In the West we have as yet little or no land that will not produce cl ver, hence, in carrying out a rotation similar to the one recommended below, it may be best to substitute clover for peas, the clover to be sown with the oats, and to be allowed to fall on the ground after mowing, and then to be turned in when mature, or, if the soil is much exhausted, not to be

ROTATION OF CROPS, Embracing the Culture of Tobacc

BY EDWIN W. FRIEND, DINWIDDIE. From the colonial times to the present day, the tobacco crop has been regarded as more exhausting than any other, not only by monopolizing all the manure collected on the land, but requiring annual clearings of virgin soil for its profitable culture. These clearings, after yielding two or three crops, and parting with much of their fertility, were subsequently often impoverished by the continued cultivation of grain through a series of years without tivation of grain, through a series of years, without any restorative process. But notwithstanding these facts, the aggregate area of land devoted to this important s'aple is probably as extensive now as at any former period. Nor can we anticipate that its limits will be materially reduced for many years to come. Occasionally, when the market is depressed, they experience are regirally extensive that the context of the corns are regirally extensive that the statement of the corns are regirally extensive. other crops are partially substituted; but whenever a reaction takes place, the culture is resumed, so that the supply is never inadequate to the demand that the supply is never inadequate to the demand for more than two or three consecutive years. As a general fact, in all that portion of Virginia adapted to relace, it is the most prolitable copy which the cultivator can direct his attention. Exacting as it is in its demands on the labor and resources of the planter, it yields more ready money than any other product; and for this reason there is no probability that the cultivation will ever be abandoned.

product; and for this reason there is no probability that the cultivation will ever be abandoned.

It becomes then an inquiry of the highest importance, whether tobacco is necessarily an exhausting crop. For it it is to continue, as hetetofore, under improvident management, to desolate some of the fairest portions of the State, every friend of agricultural progress will be justified in setting his face against it, and endeavoring to strike it off from the list of its products. But if a system can be devised for its continued and even increased cultivation, not incompatible with the progressive agricultural improvement of the country, it will be productive of results of no inconsiderable magnitude. The culture might then be pursued, no only without any anxious forebodings on the part of the proprietors of the tobacco region as it now exists, but it might be advantageously resumed in many parts of the country in which it has long ceased.

The writer of this essay ventures to submit the country in which it has long ceased.

The writer of this essay ventures to submit the following system of a rotation of crops, including tobacco, the result of much reflection and experience, in the contident belief that the object which every judicious cultivator of the soil should always have in view—namely, the certain if not rapid improvement of his land—is entirely practicable. His own success fully warrants him in recommending this system to all those—and they constitute the most numerons class—who combine the occupations of farming and planting. For those whose main occupation is planting, the system may perhaps be not so well a lapted; but even in their case he would suggest its adoption to a greater or less extent, ac-suggest its adoption to a greater or less extent, according to their respective circumstances.

Taking then a farm, which we will suppose to be in a condition not above that of the average lands of the country, I would recommend that it should be divided into six fields as nearly equal in size as convenience will permit. And here it is important to remark that the size of the farm and the number of laborers employed in its cultivation should relatively bear a definite proportion, the one to the other. It is generally admitted that, with the necessary attention to other crops, each hand can cultivate 7,000 hills of tobacco. Assuming then the number of laborers to be five, there will be 35,000 hills of tobacco, which, at the usual distance, will be equivalent to about 8½ acres. This e timate will give 17 acres to the field, or a little more than 100 acres of arable land as the proper size of a farm to be worked by five hands. If the numerical force is greater, the size of the fields should be proportionately increased. It is true that farmers may, and the other half to the wheat—say 200 fbs in allotted in the other half to the wheat—say 200 fbs in allotted given as an example of the whole:

First year—Corn, to be manured from the resources of the farm as far as they will go, Second year—Oats. Immediately after the oats are removed, one-half of the field is to be sowed in peas, with 100 lb; guano to the acre, on the part designed for tobacco the ensuing year, the vines to be turned under in the fall. Third year-The half field of peas after oats, which is to be put in tobacco this year, should be thrown up in 3½ feet beds during the winter or early spring, and the furrows half filled with straw or woods' litter. If lime or ashes can be obtained, the land should have a dressing of one or the other during the winter; and just before the plants are large enough for transplanting, an application should be made of one bushel of salt, a bushel of plaster, and 200 the Parnyian guano per acre immediately on made of one bushel of salt, a bushel of plaster, and 200 tbs. Peruvian guano per acre, immediately on the beds and litter. The beds are then to be reversed, and the plants to be set out as soon as there is a season. It is preferable to confine the straw to the furrows instead of spreading it broadcast on the land. The soil will be rendered less porous, and no heterotics will be offered to the beautiful results. obstruction will be offered to the hoes at the time of the first weeding. It will also be in a position to afford to the plant all the nntriment that can be derived from it while undergoing the process of de cay. There will be sufficient depth of soil over the straw for setting the plants, without rnnning any risk of having a bad stand. The salt is intended to keep the cnt worms out of the straw, and it doubt-less has some influence in retaining moi-ture in the soil. But it is used chiefly on account of the worms, the number of which would otherwise be greatly multiplied. It will effectually prevent their rava-

Fourth year—Wheat, with 100 lbs. of guano per

Fifth year—Peas. The land should have been plowed the preceding winter, and is to be sowed in peas by or before the 1st of June, and 100 lbs. of guano to be applied per acre. To get the full value of the pea crop, the seeding should not be postponed later than the time designated. After oats or wheat, late seeding is of course unavoidable, though the crop is still very valuable; but when it is practicable to give it the benefit of a whole season's growth, early seeding is greatly to be preferred. The plant comes to more perfect matnrity, and the vines are prolific of fruit, furnishing the best food for hogs intended to be fattened and yielding an abundance of seed for future use.

Sixth year—wheat, after the pea fallow. If practicable, as soon as possible after the wheat is harvested, the field should be laid down in peas, with 100 pounds of gnano to the acre, for the benefully studying the capabilities of the soil and hearing in mind the necessity of returning something to it when such heavy drafts are made, keeping always in view the different qualities of the groups grown in view the different qualities of the groups grown in benefit from the vines, doubtless involves a considerable amount of labor, but it is labor that is amply recompensed in the itercased productiveness of the grain crops. All labor and expense that can be usefully applied no farmer should besitate to bestow upon his land; indeed, necessity compels it before success can be achieved. And the same amount of improvement cannot be so cheaply purchased in the early stages of rotation by any other means as by peas and guano. During the second rotation, if proper diligence has been used in the accumulation of manures from the resurce of the furn, the land will be in a condition to produce clover. But until this point is gained, whether sooner or later, the pea cannot be dispensed with; and at all times it is profitable to continue its use as an intervening green fallow, when two crops are grown on the same field fallow, when two crops are grown on the same field in two consecutive year.—as between the oats and tobacco in the second and third years of the rotation and between the wheat and corn in the sixth mature, or, if the soil is much exhausted, not to be either moved or grazed. The decomposed clover will leave the land in the best possible condition for the succeeding tobacco crop. Of course in the West guano is entirely out of the question, unless home made, but mannre of all kinds should be carefully mide and applied to the corn crop. The straw and wood litter, we think, would be a better and cheaper application, if composted with the manure before applying:

Experience justifies me in stating that it is a highly ameliorating course, and that at the end of the third location the land will have attained its maximum fertility.

have attained its maximum fertility.

It may not be improper here to remark—though it will doubtless have occurred to the reader—that after the completion of the first rotation, the alternate halves of the fields are to be planted in tobacco. It will thus be only once in twelve years that any particular portion of the land will be cultivated in this crop—a period so extended that no exhausting effects can be apprehended from it.

But whether tobacco be cultivated or not, the six-shift system is believed to possess intrinsic merits which entitle it to pre-emigence over any other rotation, whether regard be had to the permanent improvement of the soil or the aggregate products of the farm. It is more particularly applicable to this region of country, which is not naturally adapted to the farm. It is more particularly applicable to this region of country, which is not naturally adapted to the vigorous growth of the cultivated grasses, but which yields abundant crops of grain under judicious management.

The improvement of the soil, however, may be still more rapidly promoted, and its fartility perpetunted, in those localities—s for example in the neighborhood of cities, and on navigable streams or railroads—where lime or ashes may be had at a reasonable cost of transportation. In light and sandy soils especially, their liberal application induces a luxuriant growth of clover sooner than animal or vegetable manures, and they secure a higher degree of fertility in a short period of time. Varying the details of the system I have recommended, by adapting it to these circumstances, and omitting the tobacco crop altogether, the following has been my course of cultivation: course of cultivation:

First year—Corn.

Second year—Orts. As soon as the oats are harvested they are to be succeeded by a crop of peas, with 100 lbs of guano to the acre, the land being well prepared; the pea vines to be turned under in the fall for wheat; and the wheat to be manured, it has from the resources of the form or by the are ei her from the resources of the farm or by the application of 100 lbs of guano, with a peck of plaster plication of 100 lbs of guano, with a peck of plaster and a bushel of salt.

Third year—Wheat. In the latter part of winter or early in the spring the field is to be sowed in clover at the rate of six quarts per acre.

Fourth year—Clover, top-dressed in the spring with any material that will shade the land and afford nutriment to the clover. Wheat straw is very valuable for this purpose, and coarse manure cannot be applied in a more economical manner. The land to be fallowed in July or August for wheat.

Fifth year—Wheat.

Fifth year—Wheat.

Sixth year—Volunteer Clover, to be pastured during the summer and fall, and fallowed in the winter for corn. It is only one year during the rotation that any field is allowed to be grazed, and this is the period I prefer. But every farm should have the benefit of a standing pasture. It will obviate the necessity of excessive grazing in case of drouth, and relieve the land from being poached in wet weather, while the soil will be sufficiently trodden by the hoof to prevent it from becoming spongy. Fifth year-Wheat.

spongy. To carry out this or any other systematic course of improvement, the farmer is required to make as great an amount of manure as the force on his farm and the available materials it will supply will and return to the soil considerably more than they draw from it. Clover is sometimes uncertain—though less so where the land has been limed or ashed—but peas constitute a never-failing resource.

Their value can scarcely be too highly estimated.
While the rotation above described is recommend-While the rotation above described is recommended as combining a greater number of advantages than any other that has come under the observation of the writer, and as being particularly adapted to the southern and eastern portions of Virginia, yet almost any system, if faithfully carried out, is preferable to the absence of all system which prevails so extensively among us. What we need, more than anything else, is systematic farming, and there can be none deserving the name that is not founded on a fixed rotation. Rotation and improvement are corelative terms; the latter cannot be carried on without the former. They must proceed together or no steady progress in agriculture can be effected. The writer is aware that, since the introduction of guano, and ulso in the neighborhood of cities where large quantities of fertilizing materials may be collected, a systematic culture has not been deemed essential. There have not been wanting ardent and enthusiastic, though perhaps inexperienced farmers, who have advocated the doctrine that the same land may be cultivated for a series of years with continwho have advocated the doctrine that the same land may be cultivated for a series of years with continually increasing crops. Under a system of high pressure it may be admitted that this is practicable. But these conditions do not apply to the country at large. With only the ordinary means of improvement at command, however industriously they may be applied, there is no land capable of resisting the ruinons effects of continual cropping. The free use of ameliorating crops is absolutely necessary. The only contingency in which a departure from a fixed rotation can be justified, if it can be justified at all, is when some particular crop happeas to be in unusual demand on account of previous years of failure, and the prices consequently above the average range.

To meet the demand for wheat for the last two or three years, the product has been greatly augmented, not only by the increased breadth of land which has been given to its culture, but by the excessive use of guano; while the most extraordinary exergious has been made to extraordinary exergious has been made to extend the tobecome the tions have been made to extend the tobacco crop the present year. It may be doubted, however, whether in the end the farmer receives a full compensation

Lust received and Paper Dolls and Paper Doll Furniture.

Just received and for sale by A. DAVIDSON, j20 j&b A. DAVIDSON,

We would respectfully call the attention of the public to a maxime embonometre placed in our window, showing the exact time. It is entirely of American manufacture, and has been exhibited at the World's Fair in Paris in competition with the best London and French Chronometers, and also at the World's Fair in New York, and in every instance has received the highest premium for nucqualled workmauship and correct time-keeping.

To our watch department we have secured the services of Mr. Ed. Helwig, of New York. Mr. II. can execute any kind of watch-work fully equal to Jurgensen, Frodsham, Adams, or any of the first London or Swis makers.

In many fine Watches that are broken, parts are substituted greatly inferior to the original, the enstoner paying the full crice for a perfect piece of work. The Watch apparently performs well atterward for a while, but is more imperies and less valuable than originally.
